Season 2 Episode 3

Interview with Juan from Third Eye Sight

Welcome to Mediumship Matters: Special Guest Edition

Hello, lovely listeners! It's me, Hannah Macintyre, back with another episode of Mediumship Matters. Today, I'm thrilled to introduce our first special guest of Season 2—Juan Francisco from New York, the voice behind the Third Eye Sight podcast. Juan is not only a publicist but also a gifted spiritual intuitive, medium, and tarot reader. So, without further ado, let's dive in!

Meet Juan: A Journey from Skepticism to Spiritual Connection

Juan grew up surrounded by spiritual influences. His father used to read cards, but as life took him through conservative schooling, that connection faded. It wasn't until a friend gave Juan a tarot reading that his spiritual path reignited. Feeling a pull he couldn't ignore, he bought his first Rider Waite Smith tarot deck, and everything shifted.

Juan started learning traditional tarot meanings, but intuition soon took the lead. The cards became more than just tools; they opened doors to deeper mediumship. Interestingly, his mediumship ability fully awakened during a casual reading for a friend—proving that spirit often shows up when we least expect it.

Tarot as a Bridge to Mediumship

Juan's mediumship journey is beautifully intertwined with his tarot practice. While reading cards, he began sensing departed loved ones stepping forward. In one profound reading, a simple card connected him to a client's late father. The message? "I'll walk you down the aisle." The client had just gotten engaged, and the necklace she was wearing was a gift from her father to her mother. Powerful, right?

Juan emphasizes that while tarot can be a bridge, spirit doesn't need cards to connect. Mediumship flows where it's welcomed.

Lessons Learned on the Spiritual Path

Juan openly shares the challenges he's faced, especially with self-doubt. The fear of being wrong—or even right—can be overwhelming. But with time, practice, and therapy (yes, therapy and spirituality can be besties), he's learned to trust the process.

Key lessons from Juan:

1. Find Your Tribe: Whether it's circles, podcasts, or mentors, surround yourself with supportive spiritual communities.
2. Trust Your Gut: Not every mentor is the right fit. Listen to your instincts about who aligns with your journey.
3. It's Okay to Be Wrong: No medium is 100% accurate. We're human channels, and mistakes are part of the growth.

Daily Practices for Spiritual Alignment

Contrary to the idea that spiritual practice requires hours of meditation, Juan keeps it simple:

- Morning Journaling: Reflecting on dreams, emotions, and setting intentions.
- Short Meditations: Even just a minute can create a shift.
- Walks with Spirit: Conversational check-ins with spirit guides while walking his dog.

Advice for Aspiring Mediums & First-Time Sitters

For those starting their mediumship journey:

- Seek authentic connections.
- Don't force validation.
- Embrace the unknown.

For first-time sitters:

- Come with an open heart.
- Don't rush to book multiple readings. Allow time to process the messages.
- Let the message unfold over time. Sometimes the impact deepens days after the reading.

Book & Deck Recommendations

- Book: Conversations with God by Neale Donald Walsch—a transformative read that challenges conventional spiritual thinking.
- Oracle Decks: Moonology Oracle Cards and Dreamscape Oracle by Matt Hughes for beautiful, intuitive guidance.

What's Next for Juan?

Juan is continuing his intuitive work, offering tarot and mediumship readings, and expanding his Third Eye Sight podcast. He's also excited to join my Elevate group soon (yay!).

Final Thoughts

Juan's journey is a reminder that spirituality isn't about perfection; it's about connection, trust, and growth. Whether you're pulling cards, chatting with spirit guides, or doubting yourself (we all do!), remember—spirit meets you exactly where you are.

Until next time, stay curious, stay open, and remember: spirit is always closer than you think.

With spirit (but never "love and light"),

Hannah Macintyre
